"When you buy from a small mom and pop business, you are not helping a CEO buy a third vacation home, You are helping a little girl get dance lessons, a little boy get his team jersey, a mom put food on the table, a dad pay the mortgage, or a student pay for college. Our customers are shareholders - and they are the ones we strive to make happy. Thank you for supporting small businesses!" by unknown

Char Clem along with her Catahoula dog named Daisy owns and operates Englewood Station Healing and Arts. Char was inspired to open a CBD and gifts boutique after her 80 year old father, a Harley Davidson enthusiast and an arthritis sufferer found it difficult to enjoy riding. The use of CBD helped relieve his arthritis symptoms. It has also helped other members of her family with PTSD, anxiety, A.D.D., Fibromyalgia and other ailments. With family owning stores on Jefferson City and Columbia, Char wanted to open one on the Englewood Station Arts District. Being a lover of the arts, it was very fitting. Healing and Arts carries a variety of CBD products, candles, Finchberry soap, Rodan and Fields skincare, essential oils. The art carried in the shop is paintings, jewelry, and writers. Merchants in the Art district receive a discount.
